

Your Cleanroom Uniform Rental Program is costing you a lot more than you think.

We know how rigorously you control the cleanroom work environment to guard against contamination. But you may not be aware of all the hidden charges seeping into your Cleanroom Uniform Rental Program.

With companies typically spending more than $1000 per employee on uniform rentals and a workforce numbering in the thousands, these buried program charges can cost you a bundle.

At Fine Tune, we can help you take control over your program expense and recoup unnecessary costs. Through our expertise in structuring and enforcing contracts, detail-driven managerial know-how and proprietary analytics, we ensure complete program transparency and greater cost efficiencies.

What's your exposure to hidden charges?

By focusing on the initial unit price of the uniform, it's easy to lose sight of significant up-charges that can affect your program's total cost. The variable and discretionary costs listed below impact negatively on your bottom line.

Loss and ruin charges

Who lost the garment? Was it really ruined? Is normal uniform wear and tear being classified as “damaged” so you pay more? Are you paying the right replacement value or are you paying a much higher “current value” to get your uniforms replaced? Fine Tune has the answers you need.

Garment inventory overcharges

It's critical for cleanroom garments to be on hand; but do you really need the quantity your invoice suggests? And, do you need to stock as many garments as you currently have? From Fine Tune's experience, the answer is definitely no.

Inflated prep charges

Sure, the uniform company needs to affix an ID to track the uniforms but do they really need to charge up to $4 per garment for this service? Fine Tune can help get this charge reduced or eliminated.

Special size charges

Many uniform companies charge extra for so-called “special sizes” like extra-large or 2x uniforms. But with so many workers wearing 2x, Fine Tune questions whether that really constitutes a proper up-charge.

Buy-back provisions

Is a buy-back really necessary? Who defines terms such as “useful life” and “normal wear and tear” so you don't get penalized? Time for Fine Tune to read the fine print.

Fine Tune is a no-cost way to reduce costs

Fine Tune has a proven track record and years of experience managing major and national uniform rental programs. We function as your personal advocate, employing industry experts to ensure your contracts are best in class.
